We have launched the "Kyotango Children and Future Project."

We have launched the Kyotango Children and Future Project, which aims to provide a safe and worry-free travel experience in the Tango region of Kyoto for children who require medical care and their families.

This project aims to help children recover and reintegrate into society by stimulating their five senses and creating fun memories through travel. It's a collaborative effort between traditional Japanese inns (ryokans) and pediatric hospitals, offering a safe and enriching experience for children with medical needs and their families. They can stay and participate in various activities, with the peace of mind that their medical needs will be properly cared for.

In addition to holding regular events for multiple families, we also offer individual consultation for private stays. Our goal is for this initiative to spread across the country, creating a future where all children can enjoy journeys filled with happiness. For more details, please check the QR code provided.

2-2 Amanohashidate: One of the Three Most Scenic Spots in Japan

Exhibit

What Are the Three Views of Japan?

They were introduced as Japan's most spectacular sceneries in Nihon Kokujiseki Kou, a book written by Hayashi Shunsai in the early Edo period (1603-1868). The three scenic spots continue to attract many visitors, with their enduring charm persisting over time.

Amanohashidate: An Ancient and Sacred Place Connected to the Heavens

The sand spit is 3.6km long and 20-170m wide and is covered with about 5,000 pine trees, which look like a bridge soaring towards heaven. Historic sites dot the park, and visitors can connect with the feelings of our ancestors at Amanohashidate.

Preserving Japan's Spectacular Scenery for the Future

We are working on developing Amanohashidate as an eco-friendly tourist destination, in order to preserve its scenic beauty for the future. We hope you will enjoy your sustainable trip there.

2-3 Reviving Jomon-era Fiber Arts: A Visit to the Wisteria Weaving Village

Exhibit

Passing Down the Art of Wisteria Weaving for the Future

The ancient craft of wisteria weaving, which dates back to the Jomon period, nearly vanished due to industrialization. However, women in the Tango region of Kyoto have revived the technique, bringing it back to life in the modern age. In Kamiseya, Miyazu City, in particular, they carefully handle every step of the process—from harvesting the wisteria vines to weaving the cloth by hand. They only take a portion of each vine, so the plants are not destroyed. In fact, by thinning out the vines, they help protect the forests. This makes wisteria weaving an eco-friendly and sustainable craft that's kind to the planet.

A Journey to Kamiseya, the Village of Wisteria Weaving

Located in the mountains of Miyazu City, Kyoto Prefecture, Kamiseya is a small hamlet where the traditional Japanese landscape remains. Here, you can immerse yourself in the ancient craft of wisteria weaving by visiting a workshop or exploring the mountains where the vines grow. You can also experience the community's traditional way of life, such as charcoal making and cooking local cuisine. Fujifu, or wisteria cloth, is the culmination of a passion nurtured by the rich nature of Kamiseya and the skills passed down by generations of women. Why not visit this place to experience its story with all your senses?

Music introduction

The Concept of Jun'on Haikei

Jun'on Haikei is a collection of the sounds of present-day Kyoto Prefecture, in combination with sounds documented in historical records and other sources, that has been enhanced with other compositions to create a unique soundscape.

In 1996, the Ministry of the Environment (known as the Environment Agency at the time) designated the "100 Soundscapes of Japan"—a collection of sounds recognized for their particular significance in maintaining Japan's unique acoustic environment. The Ministry accepted submissions of a broad range of environments (soundscapes) featuring sounds that communities across the country cherish as local symbols and wish to preserve for future generations. Nearly 30 years have passed since then, and it is time to revisit the sounds of Kyoto Prefecture. Today, we are witnessing the acceleration of global warming and the seasons are gradually blending together. Under these circumstances, mountains, forests, and other elements of nature are becoming more important and precious than ever. Kyoto Prefecture is blessed with a rich natural environment, where beautiful sounds can still be found. Field recordings have been made to preserve them, with the hope that no more of the environment will be lost. This collection also contains newly recorded sounds beyond those already recognized in the previously mentioned "100 Soundscapes of Japan."

Works of literature also contain many descriptions of sounds. Before the invention of recording technology, people had been preserving sounds through verbal descriptions since ancient times. Preserving sounds through language in this way is also a form of field recording.
